The Heart of Maryland

"The Heart of Maryland," that wonderful old war romance which has stirred two continents with its great and thrilling situations, and which was the first pronounced success which David Belasco achieved on the American stage, comes to the Tremont Theatre next Monday for a limited engagement of two weeks. This play was first produced ten years ago with Mrs. Leslie Carter in the principal role, that of Maryland Calvert. Mr. Belasco has revived it this season for an anniversary tour and has placed it in the hands of an all star cast including in its number, Odette Tyler, Edna Wallace Hopper, Orrin Johnson, R. D. MacLean, John E. Kellerd and Wallace Eddinger. Miss Tyler plays the role formerly made famous by Mrs. Carter and Mr. Kellerd plays the role which he himself created in the original cast. Every detail of the play has been perfected under the personal supervision of Mr. Belasco and throughout its present tour, "The Heart of Maryland" has won new triumphs and has received the unanimous praise of press and public. Every role is fully sustained and altogether the performances given on this tour are as perfect as attention to detail and ability can make it. The play is Belascoan to the core, and that in itself is sufficient endorsement for any performance.

NO. 3

From

Janet Holbrook, in Jamacia Plain,

To her dearest friend

Cora Wallace, in Quincy

Dearest Cora :

In one more week I'll be Mrs. Ted Taylor, Esq. Yo Golly, but I'm just about crazy over it.

Now that I am really and truly going to get married, I don't mind telling you that for the last fifteen months I've passed many a restless night over the subject of matrimony. I was beginning to get a little sensitive about being single. You know, a girl at my age either ought to be married or teaching school and as I wasn't doing either I felt my position keenly. Many and many a night I have awakened from awful dreams in a cold sweat over some terrible illusion that I was an old maid. You see I came pretty near getting by without hitting the matrimonial market, and a girl of my disposition doesn't enjoy that. If you don't know how old I am, I won't tell you, but I'm afraid if another year had gone by, it would have been knitting by the fireside with mother and the family cat for me. Of course, I might have pulled some sort of a man even a year from now but knowing my own as well as I do, I have my doubts.

But it's all over now, and I am happy. Gee, I'm almost frightened now at my narrow escape.

We are going to be married in our dining room; it is bigger than the parlor, and we have lace cartains in the dining room. It ought to be a swell affair only Ted hasn't got a dress suit. He wonders whether he ought to hire one or borrow one. I have just written him to buy a second hand one if he can get it cheap enough. We've got to have style at our wedding at any cost. I don't know who we will have to cater for us, but at this moment it looks like mother. She's a fine cook, and can make ice cream that tastes just like the store kind, and her cake beats the baker's stuff by a mile.

Our wedding cake is going to be a bird, with red, white and blue cupids chasing each other over the top.

Lovingly,

JANET.

P. S. Mother thinks we ought to furnish our dining room with mahogany, but I don't. I'm for golden oak, and by the way, I saw the loveliest dining set at the Shawmut Furniture Company for $38, that you can imagine. I guess it's me for that Shawmut Furniture.

(Letter No. 4, will be published next week.)

AFTER THEATRE.

Marshall P. Wilder tells with much gusto of two men of his acquaintance who hired a horse and trap for a day's outing in the country. When they had reached their destination the horse was unhitched and allowed peacefully to graze whilst they enjoyed some excellent fishing.

When the time came to go home the two found themselves in a predicament, for neither knew how to reharness the beast. They made many efforts, but with the same result each time. Their chief difficulty was adjusting the bit, the horse making not the least response to their overtures.

"Well," exclaimed one of the men finally, sitting down with a discouraged expression, "there's only one thing to do—wait."

"Wait for what?" asked his companion.

"Wait for the silly animal to yawn!"

to appear at the Tremont Theatre for two weeks beginning next Monday in their interpretation of "The Heart of Maryland" form perhaps the strongest congregation of stars ever gotten together at one time on the American stage. The play was written by David Belasco, who selected the cast and is producing it. Mr. Belasco is probably the greatest exponent of dramatic art now living. In discussing the success which he has achieved in stagecraft, Mr. Belasco recently said:

"No pursuit classified as an art can be revolutionized and classified as a business. Business people may enter the theatrical profession for the purpose of making a living, but unless these people nurse their business as an art they will soon cease to acquire either honor or profit with integrity. The artist who paints 50 pictures in a year must sell them for a song, but he who spends a year on one canvas may generally command the just reward of his effort, and it is always the same with the pictures on the stage. The careful producer not only reaps the recompense of his labors, but the consciousness of successful achievement—the consciousness that he has done something toward the uplifting and betterment of one of the most beautiful of the arts."

The Player Piano has now received recognition by the world's greatest pianists, composers and singers.

If you have a piano which you cannot play, and if you are interested at all, just come in and see how easily you can play anything on this piano. We carry the finest line of Players and Player Pianos in the East.

Your piano will be taken in exchange and you will have the only complete piano allowing any kind of music at any time.

Write and we will mail photographs and tell you all about the player as well as show you the "Hallet & Davis Plan" of purchasing.
